Ocean Avenue Battle Moves To Court Monday

Ocean Avenue Cost Is Asked by Citizens

The anticipated cost of altering Ocean avenue is stated as probably about $1500 by the Ocean avenue merchants who are petitioning the superior court to have Ocean avenue remain as it is. The cost would be for the removing of the present parking arrangement in the center and enlarging the garden under the pine trees.

Other past expenditures by the former city council are cited as follows:

Tree trimming: Over $2000.

Tennis courts: Over $4000.

Special audit: $4162.50.

Drainage in the McKenzie-Elizabeth McClung White dune property, since washed out: $400.

It has been pointed out that the tennis courts are so crowded on week-ends that the children, for whom they were assertedly built, have no chance to play; the special audit gained but little for Carmel and Peter Mawdsley has had to check back to 1935 in making his present audit; the trees along Scenic and San Antonio were not artistically trimmed and are an eyesore, although they do admit a view which they formerly obscured; the dune drainage job is on the schedule again, to be paid for by the city all over a second time.

Hudson Granted Associate Counsel for Trial of Parking Row

The city council goes off to the superior court wars in Salinas Monday morning with Attorney W. L. Hudson and an assistant counsel to do battle with the forces of Ocean avenue business over a restraining order got out by Byington Ford, Barnet Segal, E. H. Ewig, Ross Bonham, A. C. Lafrenz and Conrad Imelman last Monday when work began in stripping Ocean avenue of central diagonal parking and preparing for a wider center garden.

Named in the restraining order and order to show cause handed down by Judge H. G. Jorgensen were Mayor Herbert Heron, Councilmen Clara Kellogg, Frederick R. Bechdolt, Everett Smith and Gordon Campbell and City Superintendent of Streets William Askew.

Bill Askew had ploughed up part of the asphalt paving in the center of the post office block on Monday as the business men's committee rushed over to Monterey to hire Attorney Richard J. Kelly, now associated with Silas J. Mack, and moved into Salinas to solicit aid of Judge Jorgensen.

Tuesday morning quiet reigned on Ocean avenue as Askew's crew went back to making concrete pipe for work on San Antonio. To business men observers the halt to the work was no more sudden than Monday's start without the width of the proposed garden strip having been officially set by the city council.

Deer Kicks Wermuth; Doe and Faun Enter Carmel's Sanctuary

At 3 o'clock on a recent morning Patrolman Earle Wermuth chased a doe and a fawn out of brush at San Antonio and Tenth, when he heard what proved to be "night prowlers" of an extraordinary kind for Carmel.

Reports are that the fawn kicked Wermuth before the animals made off to remoter woods.

Today such a visit is a rarety, but not long ago coyotes were frequent invaders of the village. Skunks still make their homes here occasionally, both of the animal and human variety.

Rancher Bill Post of the Big Sur shot a brown bear in his cabin at Mule Canyon last week, but he lost the fine hide he had sent to a San Jose taxidermist when Fish and Game officers confiscated it in accordance with the law.

The bear was believed to be one of three introduced to the Sur region several years ago.

Some of the bear meat was also confiscated, but not before most of it had disappeared down eager gullets.

The brown bear was never native to the coast region, where the grizzly bear was exterminated many years ago.

June Building Amounts to More Than $20,000 to Eclipse Last Month Total

Carmel's building boom got under way with the advent of June and during the first fortnight of the month more than $20,000 in new construction has been started, eclipsing by about 10 per cent the total of new building for the month of May. This does not include building, however, in the surrounding area outside the Carmel city limits.

Leading permit of the month issued by Building Inspector Birney Adams was for the Church of Christ, Scientist, on Monte Verde between Fifth and Sixth, permitted under a special ordinance change by the city council last month, and providing for an addition to the church. The estimated cost of this work was placed at $6525. A. C. Stoney is the contractor.

Next in value is the permit for a one-story drive-in market which is being built by Percy Parkes at the northeast corner of Dolores and Eighth at an estimated cost of $4000.

Ben Wetzel is building two frame cottages on Mission street between Eighth and Ninth, each to cost $2000. The contractors are Lilliard and Taylor.

Fred Godwin, of La Playa, is having an adobe addition to the La Playa garage by Hugh Comstock, specialist in this type of construction. The cost was given as $2000.

C. L. Trawin is putting up a board cottage on Junipero between Second and Third for $1500, and Mabel Graham is building an apartment over her garage on Camino Real at Tenth for $1350.

Joe Perry has just completed a small office building on the Mrs. Maude Stewart property on San Carlos at Seventh for $125. A. A. Durney is building a two-car garage on Lobos between Second and third for $120. Miss Emma L. Williams is having foundations and porch put in on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth. Mrs. F. K. Wallace is having M. J. Murphy, Inc., make an addition to work already commenced on her property, and Miss Virginia Orton is adding a bedroom to her cottage on Camino Real between Twelfth and Thirteenth.

The business building of Harry and George Aucourt on Lincoln street, with a second-story apartment, and a two-story frame dwelling for Burleigh H. Murray topped building activities in Carmel during May. The apartment was added to the Aucourt building at an additional $1800. The main building was under construction in April and is now occupied by Frank Louda, Jr., the furrier. M. J. Murphy, Inc., is the builder.

Murray's new place was recently the scene of a "takslagsfest", Scandinavian custom of nailing a tree to the rooftree when the last rafter is in place. Estimated cost of the dwelling is $6500. Lennert Palme is the architect.

The Carmel Art Association gallery addition is under way on Dolores with an estimated cost of $6000. Clay Otto designed the addition.

Other items included a two-story apartment for Mrs. William McPhillips, San Carlos and Fifth, at $1000; Ed Burnham, remodeling store front on Dolores below Seventh at $300; Ida M. Theurer, concrete garage and store room at $1250, by Ernest Bixler; Ed Burnham, frame and stucco storage shed, $150; Miss Caroline Kimball, remodel and addition to cottage, $750; L. J. Meadows, addition to cottage on Lobos below Second, $200.

The May permits amounted to $18,220.

Motion Picture Features Latest In Domestic Arts

Absolutely free and without obligation, the Pine Cone's fascinating and instructive cooking school will bring the latest in domestic instruction to Carmel people at the Filmarte Theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the coming week.

The "feminine convention" is scheduled for 10 a. m. on Monday and Wednesday and at 2 p. m. on Tuesday, with not only the motion picture featuring an attractive cast, directed and filmed in Hollywood, but a comedy picture to be shown through the courtesy of Dick Bare of the Filmarte.

An added attraction will be also the large number of prizes being given through the generosity of your Carmel merchants who are contributing and whole-heartedly supporting the Pine Cone's big free cooking school.

Cooks, from the bride who is trying out cookies on the groom, to experienced homemakers, will find here something to add to their repertoire and a way to improve their culinary arts.

Through the wizardry of the camera, the problem of bringing such instruction to every person who is planning meals, doing the actual cooking or directing a domestic staff, is solved. By means of the motion picture, the most modern in kitchens and kitchen equipment will be seen and put in actual use in the course of instruction.

Nor will the baking, roasting and frying, making salads and frozen delicacies alone be touched, but the entire range of the housewife's "business" will be shown, including the marketing and the simplifying of labor through up-to-date methods.

All these contribute to good food which means good health, happiness and pleasure in the home.

Besides the free entertainment and instruction, the many gifts to those attending the shool will make the visit to the Filmarte well worthwhile. Free recipe sheets, with complete formulas for many of the delicious dishes prepared in this motion picture, will be distributed each day.

To distribute the prizes, a ticket for each prize will be given to everyone attending the show. These must be filled in and returned either to the donating store or dropped in a box in the theater lobby. The drawing will be held after the last day of the cooking school and the winners notified.

Each person gets one chance on every prize, excepting members of the Pine Cone staff and their families.

A long list of prizes includes the

Ordinance No. 196, passed as an "emergency' 'ordinance by the council June 8 and effective immediately, was declared by the plaintiffs in their suit to be not required by "emergency" of any kind, and the resolution, No. 714, enacting the ordinance with regard to Ocean avenue parking, was likewise attacked.

Speaking for the Ocean avenue committee which hired Attorney Kelly to get out a restraining order, By Ford emphasized the stand that the Ocean avenue proprietors had taken in defending themselves against possible future removal of curb diagonal parking.

Width Under Fire

Ford said that the merchants had been agreeable to removing center parking so long as they could have diagonal parking at the curb, as agreed upon by Mayor Heron and Commissioner Bechdolt. His committee, however, did not believe it advisable to have a garden strip wider than ten feet, to leave more than adequate room for traffic lanes and diagonal parking.

The danger, Ford said, would be that diagonal parking at the curb, although at the 30-degree angle, might sooner or later be found dangerous unless wide lanes were left for traffic; and the ultimate action by the council would be removing of all diagonal parking, thus reducing the number of cars which could park on Ocean avenue.

Bechdolt had indicated all diagonal parking would be eliminated in time.

The council's action was attacked in the request for the restraining order as "attempting to legislate on matters involving property and personal rights of the plaintiffs," and that the "attempt of the council to enforce the ordinance would result in a multiplicity of suits and judicial proceedings."

Carmel was described therein as "a well known and popular resort, where thousands come for summer vacatons and outings." The loss of tourist trade through the Ocean avenue parking change was declared imminent by the merchants.

Cost Said $1500

The cost of carrying out the change in parking and improving and widening of the garden strip on Ocean avenue between Monte Verde and Mission was estimated in the request for the restraining order as about $1500.

The action recalled the only similar court proceedings which occurred in 1920, also over Ocean avenue. At that time Judge Jorgensen, who will sit in superior court in the present case was Carmel's city attorney. The suit was over the paving of the main thorouoghfare and arose over an asserted attempt to pave the street with asphalt instead of the more permanent concrete.

Late this week "Carmel Associates", headed by Colden Whitman, Tilly Polak, John Jordan and W. K. Bassett commenced circulating a third petition regarding Ocean avenue, denouncing the "open air garage" which the merchants were assertedly trying to make of Ocean avenue. No reference was made to the garden width.

Wednesday evening's council meeting brought no comment from the council or those citizens present on the pending court action, beyond granting the request of Attorney Hudson for assistant counsel so as to take every precaution in handling the city's defence.

Hudson yesterday announced that J. A. Bardin and J. T. Harrington of Salinas would be associate counsel.

Capt. Robison Tells Where Advertising Cash Is Distributed

In a communication to the city council, Major Ralph Coote requested information regarding county money allotted to the City of Carmel for expenditure on advertising.

Captain Shelburn Robison reported at Wednesday's council meeting that the Business Association, as a chamber of commerce, received $150 from the county of which $50 was given to the Bach Festival, $60 to the Carmel Players, and some of the balance toward decorating the Christmas tree.

Campbell Hands In Resignation; No Successor Yet

Gordon Campbell resigned yesterday as one of Carmel 's councilmen and as youthful fire commissioner. He handed in his resignation at Wednesday evening's council meeting to take effect the following day. Today he departs for Shanghai.

"I wish to thank the mayor and the council for their cooperation," Campbell said, in quitting the post he has held for a little more than a month of the four years to which he was elected.

"I wish to express my gratitude for the wonderful way in which everything has been received by the people of Carmel and the peninsula on the announcement of my appointment as United States marshal to China, and that there were no hard feelings caused by my appointment.

"I am leaving with a very deep feeling of gratitude."

Mayor Herbert Heron stated, in anouncing Campbell's resignation, "I don't think we have ever had as young a councilman and perhaps we never had a better one. His promise of four years of service to the city was something we had looked forward to with a great deal of happiness and it is with regret that we lose him now."

In indicating that no successor may be appointed immediately, Heron pointed out that the council had 30 days in which to make an appointment, and added, "I hope we may find someone to take Campbell's place who may not be as good but very good."

Scouts' Stove Doorstep Baby

The Boy Scouts had a nice cast iron wood cook stove laid on their doorstep one morning early this week and they didn't know it until the Pine Cone's roving reporter, who rides Betty Green's steeds up Mission street each morning and saw the stove there, told Hap Hastie.

Hap got in touch with Scout Master P. A. McCreery, who rushed to confirm the gift requested in a story in the Pine Cone two weeks ago.

Whoever gave the stove is hereby thanked very much indeed. The stove will be well used.

It was also reported that the annual convention of next year will be held at Del Monte Hotel. Errol Flynn Has New Robin Hood

A new and different Robin Hood is the hero of "The Adventures of Robin Hood," the Warner Bros. Technicolor picture which will be seen next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Carmel theater. Errol Flynn, who was born to play the greatest adventurer of all time, has the title role.

Robin, the hero of innumerable songs, stories and legends, gets a new deal from scenarists Norman Reilly Raine and Seton I. Miller. They have taken the best-loved of the legends and used them as the basis for an original story which presents the merry outlaw in a new light.

A majestic musical score, composed by the renowned Eric Wolfgang Korngold, accompanies the film, and weaves a magic background for Robin Hood's feats of heroism and strength.

Guatemala Court To Try Gonzales

Transcribed evidence will be heard in a Guatemala court when Eduardo Gonzales, formerly of Carmel Valley, faces trial for the death of his wife, Maria Villa Real Gonzales, whose body was discovered last year buried in a shallow grave on a valley ranch.

Extradition of Gonzales, held in jail at Guatemala City, was first granted and then revoked when it became apparent that guarantee could not be given that California courts would not inflict the death penalty.

Gonzales disappeared from his Los Ranchitos home in the valley in September, 1934, and suspicions of foul play when the whereabouts of his wife remained unexplained, were confirmed with the discovery of her body by a workingman digging a septic tank. Mrs. Gonzales was a native of Mexico.

Gonzales was speedily trailed to his native land, Guatemala, his arrest followed, and extradition was granted March 14.

On May 5, the extradition order was revoked and Gonzales remanded to trial for murder in the courts of Guatemala, owing to inability of the federal government to guarantee immunity of Gonzales insofar as the death penalty is concerned.

Reports are that Gonzales, in his cell, claimed his wife was struck and killed by an automobile, but failed to give an explanation of the secret burial and his departure.

Extradition was revoked under terms of a treaty between the United States and Guatemala for the return of accused criminals, and by which neither country is obliged to return an accused man who stands in peril of his life, documents returned to District Attorney Anthony Brazil at Salinas revealed.

Other documents held by Brazil indicate that public sentiment in Guatemala City was strongly against returning Gonzales, identified as the son of a university professor.

Fire Crew Ready for Valley Post

The state will maintain a fire suppression crew in the Carmel Valley, it was assured this week when Harold Walls of Carmel was instructed to go to King City for equipment. Walls will be foreman of the valley crew.

Establishment of a fire lookout site and camp on the Laureles grade was announced as a possibility some time ago and according to present indications it will not be long before such a camp is established, although the present outfit will probably be only of a temporary nature.

Fighting fire in this area will be of a different nature than during recent years, it was indicated, however, because CCC camps within easy reach for extra man power have been depleted. The Sur camp is empty and the Camp Ord CCC boys are being moved elsewhere.

Walls will probably have four men under his direction and the same fire truck as was used last year here. The Carmel man has seen considerable ranger work with the state.

Bassett Fined $250 by Baugh

W. K. Bassett was fined $250 on a charge of intoxicated driving in justice court at Monterey Tuesday after pleading guilty to the charge before Judge Ray Baugh.

His driving license was suspended for 60 days.

California Highway Patrolman Charles Garcia testified in the case. Bassett was given time to pay the fine.

The charge grew out of an accident in which a San Francisco young man was struck near the Pebble Beach toll gate at the top of Carmel Hill last week while riding a bicycle.

Near Half Century Of Married Life

In celebration of the 49th wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Besecker, Mrs. F. G. Gosling entertained with a barbecue dinner on the two-acre estate behind massive stone walls at Fifth street and Guadalupe where she and Mr. Gosling are now making their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Besecker, resident for many years in the San Francisco Bay Region, came to Carmel last November to locate permanently and are residing in Vista avenue. The interesting Smith estate, occupying an entire city block, has two barbecue pits. The larger one is enclosed by a rock wall ten or more feet in height and covers the area of a small house, equipped with every convenience, even to running hot water. It was there that the anniversary celebration took place.

BENEFIT SALE PLANNED

A sale is being planned by the Monterey Peninsula Mothers' Association for the benefit of the Cooperative Nursery School. Outgrown clothing, toys and equipment in good condition, no longer needed by the little ones, are being asked for this purpose.

The location selected is an unoccupied store in the La Giralda building, Dolores near Seventh. In Carmel, Mrs. Walter Neilsen will be glad to collect articles from those who have them to donate. Mrs. F. S. Bambauer, 120 Tenth street, will perform a similar service in Pacific Grove and Mrs. Harold Mosher, 1035 Carmelo, in Monterey.

The days of the sale will be July 1 and 2.

SALINAS GOES "BIG HAT" ON TUESDAY, JUNE 28TH

Salinas goes "Big Hat" on Tuesday, June 28, according to William Jeffery, chairman of the Salinas barbecue committee. On this day the Annual Rodeo barbecue will be held at the Rodeo grounds, commencing at 6 p. m.

San Antonio Unchanged

But Tourists Come in Busses and Cars for Fiesta

By FRANCIS L. LLOYD

The years pass quietly over the Mission San Antonio de Padua and little is done to restore the old mission whose crumbling adobes have almost all joined the dust from which patient, toiling Indian hands once raised them.

Of the once proud structure, there only remains the fired brick of the collnade and the facade and the huge and massive main block of the mission of adobe, along with the cisterns, also of burned brick, and the ditch before the mission.

While only paisanos and a few gringos of the surrounding ranch country used to come in to San Antonio for the fiesta, last Sunday visitors from Carmel were greeted by four huge busses which brought pilgrims from as far as San Francisco, and by hundreds of shiny cars which brought from a distance other tourists to gaze on the spectacle and scatter their beer cans.

Early-rising residents of the area went to the Mission for the masses, and then came the outland horde, intent upon barbecue, beer, and a good time. All of which is in the nature of the fiesta, even to the hot dogs!

Came also the concessionaires, including that enterprising gentleman who runs a kind of merry-go-round, with bobbing horses mounted on a truck trailer. The horses go bobbing as the trailer goes round the dirt track, and there is great excitement among the youthful and great clouds of dust, even as real horses might make.

On turning in from Jolon toward the Mission the road runs into the beautiful San Antonio valley, with wide meadows, sparsely grassed golden hills, trimmed in graceful oaks of a dozen species. Some of the oaks are but brush, others trail graceful branches with tiny leaves toward the sky, some grow into massive trees, beneath whose shade the cattle shelter from the midday sun. These are Hearst's cattle and fine brutes.

Down along the road a spectacle greets the eye, and one Carmelite last Sunday exclaimed in strong words: "So that's how they've restored San Antonio Mission!" Actually it was not a restoration, but Hearst's ranch house.

Not content with things as they might best fit the landscape and ever attempting to do more than mere mortal should, forgetting at the same time a thing called good taste, Hearst spent many thousands building a ranch house, a ranch house to discourage all future ranch houses, shame all past ones.

The "thing" is somewhat in the style of the old Mission San Antonio, including a collonade and a facade. Perhaps Hearst hoped someday the real Mission would disappear and his spurious affair take over the aura and the "ahs!" of the tourists. Not so bad in spotless white walls and glaringly red roofs, the "ranch house" has an extension which no Carmelite would miss spotting, it is a "steal" from the Carmel Mission, the large dome, done out in yellow to surmount a squat white tower.

Only an architect with a hangover and a sentimental weakness for missions could create such a thing on paper as meets the eye on the San Antonio road.

The mission itself presents a rather beautiful picture, if the eye blots out the hundreds of visitors, their cars and the four big busses. An air of peace sweeps over the mission from the surrounding valley. The mission faces south and the sun slants among its guardian olive trees. The swallows fly in and out and cry in spite of the service going on inside the mission. The birds fly in and out as freely as in any barn. At the top of the high walls are their nests and they are busy raising young, what though a thousand pilgrims and tourists chose to enter the mission at that time.

The fiesta, in its more festive parts, is an occasion for merry-making, with the fat Indian singing his songs, drinking more beer until his Spanish songs become bawdy. He is like a dancing bear, flashing large dark eyes to emphasize his roundelay.

Beyond the crowd that jams his "pit" are dark-skinned families, children, dogs, sitting under the willows, gossiping and singing. There are pop bottles, more beer, more babies and dogs. The Mexican band starts up and dancing begins in the mid-afternoon. The sun is lower and with the heat less burdensome, the pace livens. All too soon, we found it time to depart, so as to complete a circuit back to Carmel by way of the coast road.

This meant taking the Jolon road through the National Forest, and, now newly reconditioned, is a wonderful drive, although over a rubble surface and mostly one-way. There are numerous turnouts, to permit passing, and, for the careful and experienced driver, there is no real danger. The drive is one probably unequalled anywhere in this part of California.

SUMMER MENUS

Everyone is talking summer. The shops show us bathing suits, slacks and shorts. The magazines show us brilliant summer cruises. And even though the weather man has forgotten to take in the "fog" sign here in Carmel, some morning you will wake up to find a hot summer day, with not a single idea for summer menus. So put these in the kitchen catalogue and play the smart one.

For lunch: Veal Mousse with Jellied Fruits, Waffle Potato Chips, Cake and Beverage. For dinner: Jellied Tomato Madrilene, Fresh Crab Cosmopolitan, Hot Rols, Snow Pudding and Beverage.

VEAL MOUSSE WITH JELLIED FRUITS: 3 tablespoons Knox gelatine, ½ cup cold water, 2 bouillion cubes, 1 cup cream, beaten stiff, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup thousand island dressing, 3 cups diced roast veal. Dissolve gelatine in cold water. Dissolve bouillon cubes in very little hot water. Add to gelatine. Allow to cool until slightly thickened, then add cream slowly. Chill and whip very stiff. Carefuly fold in mayonnaise, then thousand island dressing and diced veal. Pour this mixture into a ring mold. Place in refrigerator to set. In a small kitchen bowl dissolve one package of strawberry gelatine in the amount of hot water given on the package. Allow to cool until partially set. Into mixture place sliced bananas, strawberries, oranges, sliced peaches. Allow to set until very firm. Place bowl in hot water to unmold. Being very careful, put jellied fruits in center of veal mousse. Decorate with lettuce or watercress.

FRESH CRAB COSMOPOLITAN. Prepare a white sauce of medium thickness. To this add 1 cup mushrooms chopped. 1 cup chopped pimento, 1 green pepper chopped, and one pound of American cheese. Season with Worchestershire sauce, salt and pepper, a dash of cayenne and tabasco. When cheese has been thoroughly blended into mixture add 2 cups fresh flaked crab. Serve in casserole dish.

CHRONICLE AGENT HAS LATEST EDITION

Miller Stewart, agent for the San Francisco Chronicle for Carmel, announces that he has finally secured for delivery to his subscribers in Carmel the CCCC edition. This is the same edition that is delivered to the San Francisco subscribers and is much later than the edition formerly delivered here.

Players Cast Is Ready

Experienced Actors for "You Can't Take It With You"

With what practically amounts to an all-star cast, the Carmel Players are whipping into shape "You Can't Take It With You," another George Kaufmann play with Moss Hart as the collaborator.

"You Can't Take It With You" will be presented at the Sunset School auditorium July 1, 2 and 3. So great was the popularity of "Stage Door," that the Players decided to move to larger quarters for the next production which will also coincide with the big summer influx.

Director "Chick" McCarthy completed his casting last week for the play which enjoyed sensational success on Broadway and in San Francisco, with Marion Todd, Betty Carr, Dr. Lawrence Knox, Billy Shepard, Charlotte Lawrence, Bob Bratt and Connie Bell among his large and experienced cast.

Mollie Darling will be stage manager and Bonnie Lowell in charge of properties for this production.

The cast follows: Penelope Sycamore, Marion Todd; Essie, Betty Carr; Rheba, Victoria Taylor; Paul Sycamore, Dr. Lawrence Knox; Mr. de Pinna, Frank Dickinson; Ed, Billy Shepard; Donald, Clarence Lucas; Martin Vanderhof, Dr. W. B. Williams; Alice, Charlotte Lawrence; Henderson, Rex Flaherty; Tony Kirby, Meyer Edwards; Boris Kolenkhov, Bob Bratt; Gay Wellington, Hildreth Masten; Mr. Kirby, Fred Rickards; Mrs. Kirby, Marie Stockton; Olga, Connie Bell.

Coward Debut In "Scoundrel"

Noel Coward, the man responsible for "Design for Living, "Cavalcade" and "Private Lives," three of the most popular motion pictures of the past five years, at last turns motion picture actor himself to appear in the leading role of the new Hecht-MacArthur production, "The Scoundrel", now playing at the Filmarte.

Coward—actor, playwright, composer and generally conceded the most brilliant figure of the contemporary theater—plays a literary Casanova in this sharp and satiric tale of decadence in the New York smart set.

He is a hollow, artificial and brilliant publisher, so accustomed to playing at love with the unreal people who comprise his society that he fails to comprehend the realness of Julie Haydon, a young poetess, who offers him her heart.

Coward takes her from the boy who really loves her, breaks her heart and sets her adrift in his corrupt circle. He goes on an airplane trip to escape one of his importunate women and is reported killed.

While his former friends are cynically commenting on his demise, he suddenly reappears among them to pay fervent suit to Julie Haydon, the only real person he has ever known.

In a gripping, dramatic climax, she learns that it is not the real Coward who has returned, but his ghost which could not be still until it had found someone to mourn him. And she was chosen.

At the Carmel Valley home of Miss Orre Haseltine on Thursday of last week, members of the state council of the League of Women Voters met in business session. Strict regulations were agreed upon relative to maintenance of non-partisanship in the organization, primarily among executives and council members. The coming state convention at Pasadena in early October was discussed and delegates given their appointments.

Those meeting with Miss Haseltine were Mrs. Ester Voss and Miss Elizabeth Lamson of the state office, Mrs. Warner Clark and Miss Llewellyn Toland of San Francisco, Mrs. T. G. Emmons of Salinas, Mrs. Clarke Whittier and Mrs. Paul Eliel of Palo Alto, Mrs. Bradley Brown and Mrs. Allyn G. Smith of Berkeley, Mrs. James Boyle of San Marino, and Mrs. Wallace Andrews of Mill Valley.

VISITOR FROM S. F.

William Henry Black was down from San Francisco for a few days during which he stayed with the Neil Bosworths on Thirteenth and San Carlos. Betsy Bosworth is home for the summer from Mills College.

Patterson Files for Nomination

Assemblyman Ellis E. Patterson, Democrat, from Monterey and San Luis Obispo counties, filed his nomination papers as candidate for lieutenant governor in Monterey this week.

Forced to work his way through grammar school, high school and college, as newsboy, cannery worker, farm hand, in lumber camps, steel mills and as stevedore, Patterson, who is a graduate of the University of California and of law at Stanford, announced his platform as follows:

"I will continue to champion the rights of workers to organize and better their standard of living. . . I realize the plight of the small farmer has been one of hardship, always at the mercy of high water rates, foreclosures, etc. I have always been a champion of civil liberties. Natural resources must be conserved."

MRS. PRICE RETURNS

Musical Arts Delighted

Sylvia Sinding Acclaimed In Excellent Program

Acclaimed by those attending as one of the finest programs ever presented by the Musical Arts Club, the club's monthly meeting and entertainment held June 7 at the lovely Van Ess-McGowan home in the Country Club District was indeed one of distinction.

Sylvia Sinding was in charge of the program and should be complimented upon the numbers she chose to comprise the evening's delightful entertainment. Madam Sinding first gave a short talk presenting her ideas concerning singing. She pointed out that anyone can be taught to sing enjoyably if he is normal—(by normal, she means that the individual has good health, a good vocal organ, and a good mind)—if he loves music, and if he is willing to work hard enough and study long enough. She also expressed her wish that everyone would at least study some form of music long enough to ascertain whether or not they have a latent talent for that sort of means of expression. Until he has tried himself out, no one knows whether or not he can produce enjoyable music, whether it is through the medium of his voice or through a musical instrument.

In view of the points which she stressed in her talk, Madam Sinding presented two of her pupils, Marjorie Learned and June Angelin, to prove her assertions. We heard Marjorie Learned sing ourself four years ago before she started taking lessons from Madame Sinding, and we bear witness to the fact that at that time Marjorie's' voice sounded like the scared whisper of a 13-year-old. At that time Marjorie had no idea that she could learn to sing as she does now. As the result of four years' study with her excellent instructor, she now has a lovely contralto voice and sings with intelligence and fine feeling.

June Angelin was another young woman who didn't know she had a voice until she tried it out. She first began to take lessons from Madam Sinding in order to learn to achieve poise, now after four years of voice study, she has a pleasing light lyric soprano and for a young girl just out of high school, she shows remarkable talent for interpretation and style.

Both Miss Learned and Miss Angelin sung with even scales and with beautiful phrasing and diction.

Carol Moore Turner was an excellent accompanist for both singers. She didn't try to drown them out via her piano, nor did she forget the mood which they were interpreting.

The brilliance with which David Marrs plays the piano is well known in Carmel. He played at the Musical Arts Club several months ago and since then he has favored the participants in a number of Carmel gatherings with his intelligent music. He likes to play the piano, he is careful to portray the meaning of the selection to a perfection, he doesn't make his listeners conscious of his excelent technique, but it is there—consequently, it is a pleasure to listen to the music he makes via his heart, his mind, his composition, his sensitive hands, and his piano. As usual, he gave a fine performance on June 7.

The appearance of Don Blanding at the meeting was an event which has long been looked forward to by the members of the club. He came with his usual good humor and fascinating personality and conquered his audience with his readings from his books of poems. As far as we are concerned poetry should be always read by its creator to be thoroughly enjoyed. The creator of the poetry alone knows the exact way in which it should be reproduced. Don Blanding's rich full speaking voice and his excellent way of catching and reproducing every bit of beauty in a word or phrase made his part in the program well worth remembering. His work has a wide appeal as his popularity indicates and he will probably go down in history as one of America's finest poets.

Reader's Reactions

Monterey, June 6, 1938.

Editor, The Pine Cone:

In response to the various recreational suggestions made by the boys and girls of Sunset school, in your issue of June 3, I desire to express my keen interest.

Suggested activities, I note, include a swimming pool, badminton. roller skating, additional tennis court, drama for children, camera club, and various handicraft activities.

I want to assure you and the children and parents that all of these suggestions will receive careful consideration to the end that definite and regular activities, as suggested by the children of Carmel, be established.

The summer program will be under way next week, and aside from the activities on the Sunset school playing area, handicraft will be taught in the shop, as well as clay modeling classes under Madam Marie Beygrau. Consideration will be given any other activities that the children of Carmel would like to have organized.

Thanking the Pine Cone for past cooperation and anticipating continued support, I remain,

Sincerely,

JAMES H. BRAND, JR.,
County Supervisor of Recreation.

LA COLLECTA CLUB ELECTS

The lovely home of Mrs. D. E. Nixon was the setting Wednesday afternoon for the meeting of La Collecta Club. Mrs. Mildred Melrose was in charge of the program, the subject of which was music. After reading an article in Readers' Digest, Mrs. Melrose directed the group in a game, then current events pertaining to music were given by members of the club.

Election of officers for the ensuing six months resulted in the following selections: Mrs. C. S. Haskell, president; Mrs. Helen Carman, vice president; Mrs. George Ricketson, secretary; and Mrs. Flo Holm, treasurer.

The next meeting of La Collecta will take place on July 6 at the home of Mrs. Louise Rask on Lincoln, between Fifth and Sixth.

Our . . . Peninsula

A rare opportunity is offered to parents who wish their children to be happily and profitably occupied for a part of the summer, at the Demonstration School in the summer session at the University of California at Los Angeles. Already applications for attendance have reached a high mark and the work will be characterized by informality and freedom of expression under the guidance of competent artist teachers.

CARAVANSERIES ON THE COAST.....By Francis Lloyd

WE HEAD FOR MORRO BAY

There is a natural limit to distance which may be covered by campers who prefer to dawdle along the highway in any two-day period, so this time a trip northward beyond Bodega and the Russian River was out of the question, because it would take the best hours of one day to begin to strike out into new country northward.

So Morro Bay, a hundred odd miles southward on the coast, beckoned, and below that Avila, at Port San Luis, the only all-year port between Monterey and Santa Barbara.

Think of that long stretch of coast without a haven of refuge for boats and vessels during the winter storms!

We tossed sleeping bags into the car, stowed eggs carefully, coffee, bread, butter, sugar, salt and all the incidentals to a successful camping trip and set off down the coast highway. I had only been over the road once before as far as Morro Bay and that in a heavy afternoon fog a year ago. Fog being what it is on the coast, I didn't see very much and so this time was intent on seeing it all.

Fortunately, the weather was favorable, only high fog and practically no wind. Beneath the Pacific heaved ever so gently in one of the first real calms of the season. This brought out the abalone diving fleet, which can only work successfully in quiet weather, and we were to see much of their operations.

We made our first stop, no longer out of curiosity, at Hurricane Point, where the sea otters rolled in the gentle sea. It is almost impossible, once to have seen the otters, to pass that point again without stopping to watch their play in the surf. Looking much like puppies, big ones four to five feet long, with tails suggesting Chesapeake retrievers', blunt, probably furry paws, stubby legs, the sea otters seem to possess an unending reservoir of humor. Their dark brown color makes them resemble sea lions, but only because both are marine animals. Once seen, they are not likely to be confused with sea lions again, however, because of the short head, fully developed hind legs, and comical tail.

Through the park at Big Sur we made haste, looking away from man's latest picnic grounds in a spot of beauty. There are a thousand fine picnic spots without infringing on the solitude of the redwood forest, hacking at its roots, interfering with its favoring conditions of life, dusting the subtle greens with automobile grime.

Over the Sur grade, however, the scene opens upon grandeur that man may not change, unless oil is discovered beneath the sea. It is not likely that fences should cross those steep hillsides and continue out over the ocean wastes. That is something for men in boats!

From the top of the grade Gamboa Point stands out with an arc of blue water on its arms on clear days, or dull, silver-lined, ocean black-green water on dull days of high fog. Out to sea a coasting lumber schooner or tanker loafs along, below, what thousands of sea birds, sea lions and fish sport, too minute to be seen from the height. From there a fishing boat is a speck, and, seeing one which appears to be a full grey, I remark that it may be Jack Taylor and his rock cod boat. Before we have got to Morro, however, I have made this remark so many times, whenever a small boat hove into view, that it became the by-word of the tour, and a grand joke on the writer.

Leaving this view, just south of Pfeiffer's Point, we continue to roller-coast the new highway, seemingly on wings, where before the old coast road barely hung to the cliffs, or was non-existent. We wind a little, take gentle curves, up and down a little, and our travel brings us shortly to Slate's Hot Springs, once merely a name to many of the older Carmel residents, who would have needed a team to make the arduous trip to Slate's in the "Old Days". Now the resort is spruced up, built neatly and in keeping with the scenery, not obtruding man's puny efforts in glaring color or awkward fashion, and may it be kept so!

Slate's deserves a "plug", a free one, for maintaining a modest-looking resort, which might well have been an eyesore on the land-and-seascape!

Here we see another small fishing boat that's not ack Taylor again?) and pretty soon a diving boat, on which are three Japanese tending the lines to another Japanese who is diving for abalone. We can see them sculling the diving boat, hear the pop-pop-pop of the air pump motor, see now and again the men bend over the side to lift aboard the big molluscs sent up in a small net by the diver, and now, just ahead of the boat, rise a lot of bubbles, showing where the diver is walking on the bottom, looking for the shellfish. They have a fine calm and are making the most of it, although it is well on in the afternoon and they have been on the job since daybreak at 5 a. m.

Below Slate's we bring into view their mother ship, a purse seiner from Monterey, in which the abalone men have come, towing their diving boat, and in which they will take back their hundred or two hundred dozen abalones. These sell to the markets at about $2 per dozen, and a diver gets twice the share of a member of the crew, the diving boat and the mothership get shares, so if the diver owns all the equipment, including boats, he stands to gain five-ninths of the shares, when the expenses of the trip are paid. Pretty good money if you like diving!

We find along the road a pleasant spot but slightly developed and bearing the name of Lucia. A little bit down the road, nesting in the entrance to an alluring canyon is the ranger's house, nearby a trail into the "Los Padres" National Forest, to which clings the older and more euphonious name of "Santa Lucia." After all, its backbone is the Santa Lucia range, and the nearest the Spanish Fathers ever came to it was at San Antonio and Carmel, because the Santa Lucias were too tough going for Los Padres.

Along this part of the coast we find half a dozen more abalone boats working, and find their motherships, the Robin, Mishima, K. Manaka, Nereid, E. S. Lucido, and so on anchored well inshore in an open cove.

Cape San Martin now rises before us and we crowd to see what comes next. It is a wide bight almost a bay it seems from the height, as we gaze toward low-lying Point Piedras Blancas. Here we enter the Hearst property, and, with mighty sneers at the Lord of San Simeon, we make salutes such as all good Hearst-haters do. How is it that this poor man who took the land from its pioneers, toppled America into a war, ruled his newspaper kingdom with an iron hand, can by his very name conjure such feelings of hatred? I cannot help but side with those farmers who had staked out their homesteads and then found an irresistible force moving them off, bag and baggage.

We round Point Piedras Blancas, where one of the important lights of the coast warns mariners and tells them their course, and come upon San Simeon, where a whited rock grows up into the sky on top of a mountain, where sleek herds of prize cattle pay homage to the hand that feeds them, where cowboys, the neighbors claim, go hunting with Hearst's machine guns.

At San Simeon's feet is the ocean, and, on the low shore, a village of ranch-bosses, warehousemen, and a wharf where the coast's only white abalone divers bring in their catches. Here the Pierce boys are unloading, Leslie, who is the deep diver, and Karl, who is the great abalone getter. It is only a short while since a Standard Oil diver got the bends trying to find an anchor at Estero Bay, a few miles southward, and was flown to Sacramento where he died in utmost pain. Then Leslie Pierce went down and got the anchor. Those Pierce boys are a part of the rugged coast.

San Simeon is not far from Morro Bay, but there are too many things to write about to take you to Morro Bay this time. We veer away from the coast as we leave San Simeon, turning in toward Cambria, where Monterey pines grow in luxury, and on toward Morro Bay, which will be in next week's installment.

TREES AND VALUES

Recently the Monterey Peninsula Herald had out a special edition with some magnificent aerial views of the cities of the peninsula, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel. Monterey and Pacific Grove showed broad expanses dotted with buildings and residences and occasional trees; Carmel showed a great grove of pines and oaks, with an occasional roof peeking through the foliage.

Those eight-column cuts illustrated the difference between our village and its neighbors as nothing written about them ever could. Carmel, lost among its trees. Back of its long beach of white sand, almost from the edge of the cliff, far into Hatton Fields on the east, to the Point and the Walker Tract on the south, as far as the picture carried into the Del Monte Tract on the north, trees, trees, trees! The most populous parts of Carmel with barely a house in sight. It was the picture of a forest.

That arresting difference between, say, Pacific Grove and Carmel is not a matter of chance. The trees in the Grove are gone, the trees in Carmel still stand, and not because of any Divine intervention. In one place, men felled pines and oaks so that their man-made structures would be visible. In the other, in Carmel, men let Nature hide their inferior works in a charitable mantle of foliage. How many architectural mistakes are concealed behind shrubbery in Carmel may never be known.

That there is no question of the value of the forest growth is shown by the activity of city planning commissions in planting trees along the streets of our neighboring towns, and in protecting what is left them. It is slow, hard work. Every home owner wants trees anywhere else save before his own house, obstructing his view. "Plant the next street—the next block—not mine!"

Nor has it been easy for Carmel to retain its forest. For more than thirty years the battle has gone on to save every possible tree, and to plant others on the bare spaces. It used to be that there was a view of the sea from Dolores street, as one went southward to Santa Lucia, for much of its length. Between Carmelo and the beach was practically bare. Hundreds of trees that rise gloriously now were planted in these places not a score of years ago. The result has warranted the effort. We are a city in the pine forest.

BACH FESTIVAL NATIONALLY

"The Sunday concert will be nationally broadcast 8 to 9 P. M., P. S. T., over N. B. C. Blue Network."

This announcement by Carmel's Fourth Annual Bach Festival management gives an understandable idea of the importance these events have become in the musical world A national broadcast by request of one of the greatest radio stations, lasting an hour, is an honor of the first class. In all parts of America, men and women will listen to Carmel's instrumentalists and vocalists at the Mission San Carlos.

Because everyone in these days can understand the appreciation of a national broadcast of an hour's duration, the fact is cited here. In reality, it is only an item in the musical significance of the Bach Festival. That a town of three thousand inhabitants could put on so significant a presentation as has been shown in previous years, and will again be given July 18 to 24, is a thing to arouse the world's interest and wonder. It has been commented upon in musical circles everywhere, has been told in newspapers and magazines, and has aroused other larger cities to emulation.

But Carmel has something to build from, a foundation upon which to rear its musical edifice, that few cities, however large, can have. That is "background." Artists love to come here for vacation periods, and being here, enter into the spirit of such affairs as the Bach Festival, and give priceless time to its success. Money is not the lure. It is the artistic atmosphere that appeals, that intangible something that goes back and back to the building of the Carmel Mission.

Perhaps this year, certainly before long, the capacity of our largest auditorium to hold the audiences that will come to hear the festival music, will be exhausted, and new arrangements for much greater capacity must be made. In the planning of a rebuilt Forest Theater, this fact should be given consideration, and extension and improvement made to meet the need.

The credit due the Misses Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous for the unfolding of success since their original conception of the Bach Festival in 1935 should not be overlooked, or ever be forgotten. The two names, bound in a long partnership, stand for the best in musicianship in Carmel. Our town is proud to have honest claim to them as residents, although their influence and activities have covered a large field in central California. In the Carmel Music Society, in amateur dramatics, and in the Bach Festival, over a decade of musical and theatrical advancement, these two women have been an inspiration to others, and a hard working couple by themselves.

ENCHANTRESS

How lovely you are
In your gown of ebony velvet,
Spangled with jeweled-stars;
Your platinum hair woven
Of silver-threaded moonbeams,
And on your brow . . .
The haloed-tiara of the moon
That frames your face in saffron gold.
The orchestra of the sea is playing
A syncopated melody . . .
The wailing moan of saxophones,
The thundering notes of trombones
Reach my ear.
Enchantress . . . will you dance with me?

—Lillian Parcell.

AFTER DEATH

I shall come back
As the quiet falling snow,
And linger long
On the pine covered hills
I used to know.

I shall come back
As a harp-played melody,
Disguised in the fickle wind
Who courts the silver birch
With his tender rhapsody.

I shall come back
As a white bird flying,
And dip my wings
In a world more new
Than when I left it, smiling.

—Leona B. Mealey.

PREFACE TO TOMORROW

Stars beyond moonmist have a way of making
Night seem incredible with glow and shadow:
A realm of mystic contours, till dawn's breaking
Kindles quick conflagration in the meadow,
When colors of the earth in resurrection
Of morning splendor lift in common claim
For light and beauty in the sun's reflection,
And every black horizon runs with flame.

I walk through darkness, but I know my way
Along a road I have no need to see;
Dull glow of stars beyond the moonmist may
Be meagre, but it is enough for me
To follow by. I know impending day
Is darkest night's authentic prophecy.

—Carl John Bostelmann.

LIKE THE POMEGRANATE

Like the pomegranate,
your mouth now closed in leaves of greenest silence, beloved,
is a red prison of music.

Like the pomegranate later to be cracked in the sun, beloved, your mouth will open and show the pearly seeds of song.

—Virginia Wilhelmson.

DO WE NEED A JAIL?

As we get it, this fawn and its mother, a doe, were trespassing on private property in Carmel, probably in a flower garden, contrary to the law made and provided, and against the city ordinance governing trespass. A regular authorized police officer, after ordering the fawn and doe to move on, attempted to use such force as necessary to make his orders good, when the fawn kicked him somewhere on San Antonio avenue.

Where else he was kicked, or how often, we are not informed, but it seems no arrests were made. Carmel has neither a jail nor a zoo. The fawn was operating without a license and without tail lights. Tests for intoxication were not given.

Whether or not this incident, and the further fact that two bears have recenly been seen and one shot down the coast, will necessitate the installation of a Zoological Garden in Carmel is a matter to be taken up by the Park Commission.

SCHOOL LETS OUT

This is the time of year that finds the youth of the country casting about for something to do with his free days, now that school no longer taxes his energies, occupies his time.

Many Carmel boys and girls will find right at hand a source of health, strength and happiness, the beach, with sparkling surf for swimming, a long strand for running, and a wide expanse of sand for informal games. These are the best of all provisions of healthful exercise, and they don't cost a cent, because God made them and Carmel's guardians have kept them unexploited by beach concessions.

There are also hills for long hikes and camping, and in them streams for fishing and pools for swimming. Dry, mountain air is conducive to a normal existence and deep sleep at night and the heat of the highland days urges growth. Up hill and down hill, clambering over rough territory, give plenty of body-building tramping.

Then there are camps in the Santa Lucias and other organized sports, including horseback riding, some of the finest of which may be enjoyed right at hand, with stables in Carmel providing horses and with trails wandering through the hills, a good place to travel.

With all outdoors to be enjoyed, what more do the young men and maids of Carmel need?

"The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings", and far more healthy when fall comes around with new scholastic efforts to be made after a busy summer in the open.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

When the Carmel Players put on "Stage Door" more than 70 Watsonville folk came over to Carmel to see the production. Among them were many members and supporters of the Watsonville Footlighters Club, an organization formed during the past winter to provide an outlet for amateur theatrical talent and modeled on the lines of our own Players.

Last week Frank Townsend, president of the Carmel Players, and a party which included Mrs. Townsend, Ted Leidig, Frank Hefling and others, paid a return visit to see "Three Cornered Moon," ably presented by the Watsonville dramatic group.

Among those who did much to form the liaison between the two groups was Lyle Bate, formerly active with the Carmel Players and now a valued member of the Footlighters. His sister, Kay, was recently in "Stage Door."

Probably the best in "Three Cornered Moon" were Alice Slusser, as the simple-hearted mother, and Laurie Matiasevich, as the impulsive weakling son. Kathleen Farrell, Larry Cunningham, Claude Nelson, Dan Delano, Jack McDowell and Betty Sutherlin completed an excellent cast. Billy Scurich was the director.

Following the play, the Carmel visitors were made welcome at an informal reception.

Carmel in its day has had the elite of women swindlers for its guests. Genevieve Paddleford, world-renowned; Barbette Hamel, of coast-wide reputation; and Roberta Hall, poetess and rubber check artist, all have given our village their specialized attention. Many merchants have souvenirs of these visits in checks that returned from the bank marked "N. F." or "No account".

Barbette was the first, way back in the days when Louis Slevin was postmaster, and he remembers her because of a C. O. D. package that contained silken hosiery when she took it out to examine it, and held old newspapers when she brought it back to return to sender, unwanted. Louis had to pay for that hosiery, and he never even got to see it.

Later on, Barbette was here again, and worked out a plan to solicit donations for the reconstruction of the Carmel Mission, so clever a plan that the Church dignitaries agreed to it and gave her proper credentials. Her crusade through the state was highly successful, but none of the funds raised ever reached the Church coffers. When the police caught up with her in the southern end of the state, all that she would give back were the credentials through which she had acquired a neat little fortune.

Mrs. Paddleford was not so fortunate here. She arrived needing summer clothes, and the Carmel shops satisfied her aesthetic tastes. She purchased extensively, paid with meaningless checks, then failed to move on promptly. She was arrested, tried at Salinas, and sent to the penitentiary for a term of years.

But she wasn't entirely friendless. In the courtroom, day by day throughout the trial, a man had sat who could not believe in the guilt of the attractive prisoner. With her conviction, he began getting her probation or a pardon, and was so successful that she was soon out of her cell and on the way east to make the headlines in newspapers there. A new name but the same Genevieve Paddleford.

Roberta Hall was our latest acquisition, her story one of the glad surprises that teach us that Santa Claus is not entirely a myth. Checks that had everything a check needs to be a useful piece of paper came from the woman's prison at Tehachapi to Carmel merchants recently, making good the delinquencies of her visit to the village. We have never read Roberta Hall's poetry, but she writes a good check.

Now it is Arthur Millier, art editor of the Los Angeles Times, from whom we quote, and the subject is Maynard Dixon, artist of San Francisco, who is so well known and has so many friends in Carmel that he is thought of as one of the hometowners. The occasion was an exhibit of Dixon's paintings at the Stendahl Galleries.

"His painting is a silent rebuke to the phony desert romancers. He loves the land so well that close analysis of its line, tone and color cannot chill his ardor for it. He can paint it impersonally because he no longer knows where Maynard Dixon ends and the West begins.

"The honesty of his love is deep and important. As far back as 1912, ending a five-year stretch as illustrator of Western stories in New York, he made his crucial decision when he wrote this:

"'I am being paid to lie about the West, the country I know and care about. I'm going back home where I can do honest work.'

"At 63 he is still scrupulously honest about his work and country. Behind him lie those alternating stretches of lack and plenty, achievement and failure that are the artist's life. The Dixon inheritance included saving salts of quizzical rationalism, frontier independence and dry humor. He keeps hs hat on in the presence and laughs when he will.

"Dixon is not sentimental about the 'passing of the range', though he was born and raised in the Miller and Lux empire of cattle ranches. His West is more than picturesque cowboys. It is a land in which man can rise to a fine pitch of self-reliant freedom and dignity, and in that spirit he paints it."

The BOOK EXPLORER speaks from the BOOK DEN

BOW DOWN TO WOOD AND STONE: Josephine Lawrence. Little, Brown and Company. $2.50.

If you've read one of Josephine Lawrence's previous novels, you will know what to expect in "Bow Down to Wood and Stone." She has written "Sound of Running Feet," "If I Have Four Apples" and "Years Are So Long," which, her publishers declare, made both a literary reputation and a commercial success for her.

The Book-of-the-Month club has designated her as one of that tiny group of authors which has had two books chosen as monthly selections, thus singling Miss Lawrence out from many who strive.

Her success is based largely upon the handling of her subject, the manner in which she preserves the even tenor of her way. This story is ranked in scope and craftsmanship ahead of anything that she has done before.

What is the story? It is the everyday life of three sisters, each of whom dramatized herself as making her life a sacrifice. Seneth gave her life to her children. Brosia made her husband a success. Gillian lived for her job alone.

Miss Lawrence writes of people and not of characters, taking up their problems as they arise, and the recognition which she has achieved has been on the ground of literary distinction, writing novels which the critics take seriously and which the reading public in large numbers welcome.

Carmel Adds Color To Peninsula Garden Show

Presenting a flower show comparable with those of longer years' standing in larger cities of the state, the Monterey Peninsula Garden Club opened its doors to the public last Friday afternoon, continuing until Sunday evening.

The exhibits sent from every section of the peninsula occupied two main floors and a mezzanine of one of Monterey's larger stores. Starting with the Recreation Commission's sail boat of rich scarlet geraniums at the entrance, paths threaded their way among lawns, pools, toy bridges, rock gardens, and garden beds without number. Simulated redwood trees had the appearance of supporting the second floor.

Passing through arches and doorways of shrubbery, one discovered table arrangements with artistic floral centerpieces, other isolated altars of beauty, designed by flower arrangement artists, both amateur and professional, dwarf buildings and landscaping, potted plants with rare blooms, fern gardens, and cut flowers in profusion.

An outstanding display was that of Herbert Hoeser of Carmel, a garden in miniature, its green lawn, bordered with white pansies, leading to an old pump, with massed shrubs as background, outlined with graceful callas and other blooms. Mrs. Horace Dormody of Carmel exhibited pelargoniums of unusual variety and size, above which was suspended a hanging flower pot from which graceful sprays of Balkan fuchsias swung.

A glass bowl of gigantea specie roses, showing various stages from tight tea-rose buds to large open, single white blooms, was the offering of Miss Anne Grant of Hatton Fields. Miss Tilly Polak's table set with crystal and silver was adorned with a most artistic centerpiece of flowers arranged by her assistant in the Ocean avenue shop, Miss Anne Nash. A noteworthy showing of azaleas was that donated by Mrs. Charles A. T. Cabaniss of Pebble Beach. Mrs. McKim Hollins, also of Pebble Beach, sent gladiolas that would arouse the envy of any aspiring amateur floriculturist.

The Der Ling Shop of Carmel exhibited a table featuring a gold lacquer Buddha beside a Peking glass flower bowl holding red pentstemon and fuchsia, set against an antique Chinese scroll. Others from the village who sent offerings were Mrs. Gladys Young, Mrs. Burton M. Doolittle, Mrs. Hugh W. Comstock, Mrs. N. Jacco and Mrs. Reginald Newman, exhibiting together, Miss Dene Denny, Miss Hazel Watrous, the Corner Cupboard, Parson's Antique Shop, and Miss Edith Hollis.

Mrs. F. L. Knudsen of Monterey was general chairman of the flower show, ably assisted by Mrs. William M. O'Donnell, president of the garden club. Much praise is due them for their efforts and the success achieved.

I, the undersigned Clerk of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea and Ex-Officio Clerk of the Council of said City

Do hereby certify:

That the foregoing Ordinance is a true and correct copy of Ordinance No. 196, which was introduced at an adjourned regular meeting of said Council on May 18, 1938 and was passed and adopted at a regular meeting of the Council on June 8, 1938, by the following vote:

AYES: COUNCILMEN: Heron, Kellogg, Smith, Bechdolt, Campbell.
NOES: COUNCILMEN: None.
ABSENT: COUNCILMEN: None.

I further certify: That said Ordinance was thereupon signed by Herbert Heron, Mayor of said City.

One of the biggest San Francisco weddings of the year had a Carmel angle this week when James Flood, wealthy owner of the famed yacht Dorade, took as his bride Elizabeth Dresser. Her sister, Mrs. Ward Law, was among those present. Both Mrs. Flood and Mrs. Law are well known in Carmel and spent many of their summers here as girls.

Jimmy Flood won the "Governor of Hawaii" trophy when his Dorade led the race to Honolulu in 1936.

One of June's loveliest brides was Miss Dorothy Jane Beaumont of Del Monte who last week, on Thursday morning was married to James Beveridge Wilson of Carmel at the Royal Presidio Chapel in an impressive ceremony performed by the Reverend John F. Durkin, assisted by Reverend William Batt.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Betty Ann Beaumont, and Bruce Manson of Fresno was the groom's best man.

Following a reception and breakfast in the dining room at Hotel Del Monte at which members of the two families were present, the young couple left for a wedding trip in the north. Upon their return they will make their home in Pacific Grove where Mr. Wilson is connected with the California Water and Telephone Company.

Many San Francisco artists are enjoying Mrs. Ballache's hospitality, several staying as house guests. Among them have been Mrs. Charles Felton, member of the Federation of Arts board, Mrs. Ruby Adair, secretary of the Art Association, Mrs. Harriet Whedon, also of San Francisco, on the council of whose Art Association she acts, and William Gaw, whose canvas, "The Vesper Hour," has brought him again this year the purchase prize at the annual Art Association exhibit. He is now on the staff of the California School of Fine Arts.

For the past several months Carmelites have been interested to find the name of Jeanne Pirenne listed prominently on the cover of the well-known French magazine published in New York, "Le Messager De New York Revue" as one of its contributors.

Investigation reveals that the petite Frenchwoman is writing a series of articles for that publication concerning Carmel and the history of Carmel. She explains that her two or three remaining articles on that subject are scheduled to appear in subsequent issues of "Le Messager De New York Revue." We can't read French, so we can't comment on the articles, but if Madame Pirenne wrote them, they must be good.

We noticed that Madame Pirenne's name was in good company, for among the other contributors to the magazine the editor of which is H. A. Jules, were the names of President Albert Lebrun of France, G. Lenotre of the Academy of France, and Paul Reynard, well-known French author.

Merle Hilbert and her son Arthur have left Carmel for Riverside where they will make their home with Mrs. Hilbert's brother-in-law and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hilbert. Mrs. Hilbert has been a resident in Carmel for a good number of years.

Madame Borghild Jansen was hostess to a group of her friends last week at her studio. Those enjoying the gracious hospitality of Madame Jansen and the antics of John and Mitzi's marionettes, who were also present, were: Marie Elizalde, Margaret Konarsky, Countess van Eagen, Helen Anderson, John and Mitzi Eaton, Harvey Taylor, Gordon Edington, and Aynsley Chapple.

Among Carmel people attending the fiesta at the San Antonio Mission last week-end were Jerome Chance, John S. Gilbert, Frank Lloyd, Sidney Robertson, James Hopper, Bonney Lowell, Artie Lane, Mr. and Mrs. George Ramos, and Bill Irwin.

Following their marriage Sunday morning at St. Mary's-by-the-Sea Church in Pacific Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Petersen (Anne Norwood) were the guests of honor at a wedding breakfast at beautiful Forest Lodge. Members of the family and the wedding party assembled in the attractive dining room at Forest Lodge to fete the popular couple.

The Sidney Clarks left Carmel Wednesday for Sagamore Beach, Mass., where they will spend the summer. They will either be in Paris next winter or Carmel. They are torn between their emotions—they want to go to Paris—but they love Carmel. We hope Carmel wins.

Max W. Newberry, older brother of Perry Newberry, died last Friday night at his home in Coldwater, Michigan. The end was sudden, and came as he slept. He was 70 years old, and had visited in Carmel.

Col. and Mrs. Edward L. Butts of San Francisco were week-end visitors in Carmel, stopping at Hotel La Playa.

* * *

Mrs. Howard Clark of Hatton Fields entertained as house guests over the week-end relatives from Pasadena, Mrs. Clive Hastings and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth. Mrs. Hastings enjoys the peninsula for sketching and hopes to return for a longer visit soon.

Guests at the D. W. Scripture home last week included Kevin Wallace and Kenneth McLaren of Berkeley.

Dr. Jack Wright, of Vancouver, British Columbia, and his bride, were honeymooning at La Playa this week. Dr. Wright is a former Davis Cup player, having been on several teams representing Canada while he was a medical student at McGill University.

Review of the year's activities covered a varied list, as follows: Child welfare and education fund, rehabilitation, Boy Scouts' permanent camp at Big Sur, Los Angeles flood relief, emergency needs in Carmel through the agency of the Red Cross Poppy Day, Veterans' hospital, and the local Legion fund. CRAFTSMEN'S GUILD OPENS SHOP WITH PASSING FINE EXHIBITION

The Carmel Guild of Craftsmen have something to be proud of, their new-born shop in the Court of the Golden Bough, in which beautiful things, all the work of loving hands, are to be found, from fine fabrics to wrought iron, peasant tables and excellent photography.

Woodcarving and other woodwork, including tables, benches, chairs and chests, form a solid foundation for the hundred items of pewter, copper, tin, pottery, leather, rugs and needlework.

Opening Wednesday, with Herbert Heron, up bright and early and not appearing at all in the official capacity of mayor, the first to sign the register of visitors which before the end of the day contained nearly a hundred names, the Guild Shop was thronged throughout the day. Miss Dorothy Love, Miss Jane Bouse, Helmuth Deetjen and Johan Hagemeyer shared in welcoming the guests.

The shop was put in shape by members who shared in the labor of painting, cleaning, scraping, and decorating, and the landscaping was donated by the Professional Gardeners' Roundtable with Miss Edith Hollis in charge. Brick for the new alley way was given by Keith Evans, of the Plaza Fuel company, and the work of laying the brick was done by Floyd Adams and Deetjen.

Tilly Polak loaned a glass lamp shade and the Carmel Art Association loaned a print by Abbie Lou Bosworth, thus completing the arrangements as a thoroughly community proposition.

Exhibitors included: Charles Sayre, Helmuth Deetjen, woodwork; Horace Lyon, Johan Hagemeyer, photography; Francis Whitaker, wrought iron; Dorothy Bassett, Henry Dickinson, Anne Grant, pottery; Mrs. Parsons, pewter, copper; John and Mitzi Eaton, puppets; Bob McAllister, wood figures; Ferdinand Kretz, metal screen; August Gay, furniture, chests; Roy Zoellin, woodcarving; Catherine Seideneck, leather; Misses Kleinschmidt, leather; Mrs. Olsen, rugs; Myron Oliver, wood candle sticks; D'Arcy Gaw, needlework; Marian Howes, weaving; Margaret Lang, pewter.

Holman's Wins Electric Prize

Winner of first prize in the Electric Appliance Society's 1938 electric refrigerator campaign window contest was Holman's Department Store, which topped district three, consisting of all towns in northern California smaller than Stockton.

Speaking with becoming pride, W. R. Holman recently outlined the display which Herschel Jones, window display manager of Holman's, and his assistant, William Gwin, prepared with art work and design by Ritchie Lovejoy, who is advertising manager.

"The prize-winning window," Mr. Holman said, "was done in severe blacks and whites, showing a Frigidaire against a black background.

"Upon the Frigidaire was painted a smiling face and, with two arms, it reached out on either side, presenting full money bags to a salesman and a housewife.

"Above this setting were the words 'It pays for itself, then pays you', the 1938 Frigidaire, based on the campaign slogan for 1938."

Other district prizes were given for San Francisco, Oakland, and Berkeley, as a group, and Sacramento, Stockton and San Jose, as a second group. The remaining cities in the campaign territory included the third district which included Pacific Grove.

ABALONE RAMBLINGS

By "DOC" STANIFORD

I was going to write a letter to a friend of mine—who I wanted to write a friend of mine—and recommend a guy—now playing on a baseball team in the American League, but before I wrote I was fortunate to pick up a newspaper and found out this chap was given the O. K. by a certain feller known as Cyrus Raymond (Ty) Cobb, and all my good intentions went to, oh well yes I really was going to ask our old friend, Frank Sheridan to write Connie Mack of the Philadelphia "A's" and say some nice things about Sam Chapman, the Cal varsity football star, but, oh well, he doesn't need it now, so that's that. But I still have some aces up my sleeve and that's about a boy known around these diggings as Johnny Sheridan, and I hope in the near future we will hear about him as a darn good pitcher that will make good in any league. I know I am right in making this prediction; any way I owe Frank a letter and I will no doubt get one from him if he reads this article—and I am afraid he will.

The reports I get about John through the grapevine channels have been very satisfactory and I am very happy about such good news.

FLASH! Bob Vance just dropped in the store to say he was contemplating a rival soft ball league to be known as the Sea Otter League. Sea otters, he claims, can just lick the tar out of abalones.

Frank Louda, Jr. Fur Store Opens

Ted Jerstad, manager of the new Carmel store of Frank Louda, Jr., the Furrier, throws open the doors today on a welcome addition to Carmel's Rialto.

The fur store, on Lincoln street south of the Seven Arts building was especially built by George and Harry Aucourt, long owners of the property, for Frank Louda, Jr.

Jerstad said yesterday that his firm had made a definite attempt to bring to Carmel the most modern fur store and equipment to be found anywhere in the United States and added "We hope the people of Carmel and its visitors will be pleased with it."

The stock which will be on display includes silver foxes and red foxes and capes; ermine coats, lambs and caraculs, broadtails, martens, and other choice furs.

The store is equipped with a reinforced concrete storage vault with a bank-type, double-pressure door and the entire building is burglar proof. Facilities are offered for the cleaning and storage of furs and fine clothes with full protection against pests as well as burglars. The cleaning process offered is the modern furriers' system.

Highland Water Rate Advanced

Interim rates have been set by the Railroad Commission for the service at the Carmel Highlands provided by the Carmel Development Company. The rates are those which formerly prevailed in Monterey and are a slight increase over the former rates.

In addition the cost of $2 per fire plug will be borne by the Highlands fire protection district where formerly there was no cost charged by the Carmel Development Company for such use. There is a $1 surcharge also per plug.

The rates were handed down in a decision dated May 31, to remain in effect until a further order of the Railroad Commission.

The basic charge for ½ and ¾-inch meter is $13.20 per year with a monthly entitlement of 300 cubic feet, subject to a surcharge of $12 per year. Meter quantity rates are $1.10 for the first 300 cubic feet; 30c for the next 700 feet per hundred and 25c for the next 1000 feet per hundred.
